Attachment to Change Order #1, 7-17-24

1. A geotechnical soils investigation and report was conducted prior to going to bid with the project and provided to the contractor during the project bidding phase. The soils report was based upon five soil borings within the footprint of the drinking water treatment plant (DWTP) and reported that the soils were suitable for the support of the drinking water treatment plant building. The geotechnical engineer determined that the soils under the membrane filter feed tank was not strong enough to support the membrane filter feed tank. The membrane filter feed tank is outside the footprint of the DWTP building. The geotechnical engineer recommended removing the unsuitable soils and replacing them with suitable material. This was done.
2. During the grading of the entrance road to the DWTP, buried trash was discovered in the roadway alignment that was not known at the beginning of the project. The trash was removed and hauled to a licensed municipal solid waste landfill.
3. The DWTP building is insulated to provide a suitable interior temperature for the drinking water treatment equipment. Bag insulation was determined to be the most cost-effective type of insulation. Spray-on insulation is effective but has an unsightly finish. Bag insulation looks great when it is newly installed but is subject to being torn by equipment and personnel. After studying the alternatives, installing metal interior liner panels over the bag insulation is the best solution.
4. Strengthen Roof for Solar Panels. The Georgia Environmental Facilities Authority has a funding program for Solar Panels for local governments. The program provides low-cost funding for the solar energy generation project. Providing solar electric energy to the water plant will be cost effective. The roof system on the DWTP building was strengthened to accommodate the addition of solar panels on the water plant and reducing the electric energy cost associated with the operation of the DWTP.
5. The city purchased drinking water treatment process equipment directly for the DWTP. This was done so that the city could select the process equipment to manufacture the drinking water. If the contractor selected the equipment, it might not have been the solution the city preferred. Advanced purchase also provided that the equipment was on site when the contractor was ready to install it. This equipment needed to be stored indoors to prevent damage by the weather. The city does not have the warehouse space available to store this expensive and sensitive equipment. Purchasing shipping containers and storage shed was more cost effective than renting warehouse plus it is right on the site. The containers and storage shed become the property of the public works department at the end of construction.
6. Increase the contract time by 156 days. The City requested Heavy to slow down work for cash flow reasons and Heavy complied. Therefore, Heavy should not be penalized for assisting the City with the project time line.
